PERSONNEL MANAGEMENT ADVISORY SERVICE SCH

By

P. J. OVID*

With a view to creating good industrial and human relations b employers and the employees and looking after the welfare of the w thereby achieving and maintaining industrial peace in the State, th ment of Maharashtra has established a Scheme, called the " Personn ment Advisory Service Scheme ", under the Office of the Comm Labour and Director of Employment, Bombay since May 1959. Th which is a non-statutory Service, is purely voluntary in nature and, suggests, is purely advisory in character. It aims at prevention and of differences and disputes between employers and workers throug intervention. The main object in introducing such a Scheme was to the existing formal machinery for settlement of industrial disputes b of preventive mediation, though greater emphasis on the human industrial relations.

2. Under the above Scheme, the stress is, therefore, on self-reg on application of human standards and moral values in industrial The discussions under the Scheme are purely informal and the therefore, always free and frank and without any inhibitions. S discussions help the parties to properly appreciate each other's poi which ultimately leads to amicable mutual settlements.

Under the Scheme, voluntary advice is given to the employers, v their organisations in regard to their varied industrial relation The suggestions that are offered to the parties under the Scheme, a gating into their complaints, are generally practical ones and de legal niceties or technicalities.

3. The primary object of the Scheme is to ' nip the trouble i before it assumes any serious proportions, if necessary, even by pro and ready solutions to the problems at issue. In other words, is mainly directed towards preventive mediation in industrial relatio as against curative intervention, which has been provided for unde Book. Thus, this Scheme is complementary to the existing statut relations machinery in the State and the same mainly encompasses the field of preventive mediation in industrial relations, which field is not adequately covered under the existing Statutes.

4. The Scheme is under the charge of a Deputy Commissioner of Labour, who is assisted in its administration by Assistant Commissioners of Labour and Government Labour Officers. The Scheme has, over the period of years, been gradually extended to the Mofussil areas of the State as well, where it is being administered by the concerned Deputy Commissioners of Labour, Assistant Commissioners of Labour and Government Labour Officers. By and large, the following types of cases are investigated into and endeavoured to be resolved under the Scheme :—

1. Cases concerning threatened strikes, closures and large-scale retrenchments or lay-offs ;

2. Cases relating to actual strikes, lock-outs and large-scale retrenchments or lay-offs ;

3. Cases with regard to harassments and victimisations of workmen or unfair labour practices on the part of either of the parties ;

4. Cases concerning threatened or actual " go-slows " or " work-to rules ", etc. by the workers ;

5. Cases concerning general demands, bonus or termination of services o employees in establishments or institutions, which have been held by th Courts to be outside the purview of industrial relations law e.g. Solicito Firms, Clubs, etc , and

6. Cases of employees, who are not covered by the definition of " worl man " under the industrial relations law.

The aforesaid list is only illustrative and not exhaustive.

5. Cases are admitted under the Scheme both at the request of the parti as well as sou-motto by the Officer The source of information about t cases to the Office, for admission under the Scheme, are the various intelligen reports received by it from the Field Officers under it, the numerous exchan of correspondence between the parties, copies of which are usually endorsed them to the Office, Press reports, etc.

The following are the statistics of the cases that have been investigated un the Scheme, during the last 13 years between 1960 and 1972 :—

Year	Cases handled
1960	200
1961	366
1962	832
	1,272
	1,950

Year	Cases handled
1965	2,065
1966	2,703
1967	1,801
1968	1,603
1969	1,175
1970	1,161
1971	1,141
1972	1,439

6. The figures indicate the popularity of the Scheme in the State. experience under the Scheme shows that such a non-statutory service i necessary for the State Labour Department, as a complement to its stat industrial relations machinery, for the satisfactory resolution of the co and vexed industrial relations problems that come up before it, which c be either fully or properly processed under the formal statutory mach In particular, the Scheme has been found to be extremely useful in what m called "informal arbitration" cases. As is well-known, the parties, cularly the employers, are usually unwilling to have recourse to formal ar tion in labour disputes, for various reasons. On the other hand, the wo and their Unions are often reluctant to take disputes to adjudication, on f of negotiations, for their own reasons. It is here that informal advice though the same may be rough and ready, which is given to the parties the Scheme, as to what may be fair and proper in the circumstances that c in brining about an understanding between them with regard to their dis Subsequently, the parties do get the matters formalised by recording nec Settlements in the matter under the statutes. Several such "informal ar tion" cases have been undertaken under the Scheme, with a fair measu success.

7. Finally, the informality under the Scheme shortens the time in bri about amicable settlements between the parties, which is very often n case when the disputes are processed through the existing legal system. Scheme has thus a very important role to play in creating proper and he industrial relations in the State. It is, therefore, commended to other as well for resolving the differences and disputes between employers and men and to see that in industrial relations there remains no wrong w a remedy.

MONTHLY PROGRESS REPORT FOR THE MONTH OF OCTOBER, 1972

EMPLOYMENT SITUATION IN GENERAL IN MAHARASHTRA STATE FOR THE MONTH OF OCTOBER, 1972

The total number of vacancies notified to Employment Exchanges during October 1972 showed a rise as compared to the previous month but the number of applicants placed during the month showed a fall.

Vacancies notified to Employment Exchanges rose to 7,532 in October 1972 from 6,869 in September. Placements declined to 2,931 during the month from 3,213 in September.

The fall in placements is observed in all Sectors except the State Government Establishments where the applicants placed rose to 959 from 822 in the last month. In other Sectors, the position was as follows :—

1,128 applicants were placed in Central Government Establishments as against 1,416 in the last month, 429 in Quasi Government Establishments as compared to 521 and 415 in Private Establishments as compared to 454 in September.

The fall in placements is presumably due to non-receipt of results of submissions. The position may perhaps improve during the next month consequent upon the rise in the notification of vacancies during the month, if the results of submission are received in time.

The analysis of vacancies notified shows a rise in the Central Government and Private Sectors and a fall in State Government and Quasi Government Sectors. Vacancies notified to Central Government establishments during October 1972 numbered 1,907 as compared to 1,719 in September, 1,649 in the State Government establishments as compared to 1,670, 980 in Quasi Government establishments as compared to 1,064 and 2,996 in Private Establishments, as compared to 2,416 in the last month.

There was a further fall in registrations which receded to 30,533 from 32,398 in September 1972.

The number of application the Live Register of Employment Exchanges stood at 5,57,729 at the end of October 1972.
